REGISTRAR'S NOTES

Cypripedium calcicolum or calcicola - and other names terminating in -cola/um/us

Following the note in an earlier Orch. Rev. Suppl. and SLOH Addendum 2002-2004: vi explaining that Cyp. calcicolum was the valid name for the plant previously known as Cyp. smithii, (see also Gruss and Paterny in Die Orchidee 56(4): 478-479. 2005), Dr John David kindly brought to my attention that words terminating in -icola are indeclinable. Words with this termination indicate dwelling or living in something. Examples include: caelicola, dwelling in heaven; calcicola, growing in limy soil; rupicola, dwelling on rocks, see Stearn, Botanical Latin: 214 (1973). Hence the correct name for this orchid is Cypripedium calcicola. For a full discussion see Nicolson, D.H. (1987). Species epithets ending in -cola, a retraction concerning -colus and -colum. Taxon 36: 742-745. There are other orchid names which also require similar modification to -cola termination including: Bulbophyllum monticolum Hook.f.; Camaridium quercicolum Schltr.; Cyclopogon saxicolus Schltr.; Cyrtopodium paludicolum Hoehne; Epidendrum monticolum Fawc. & Rendle; Epidendrum oblongialpicolum Hagsater & Dodson; Epidendrum paradisicum Hagsater & Garcia-Cruz; Epidendrum rupicolum Cogn.; Epidendrum saxicolum Kraenzl.; Genoplesium alticolum D.L.Jones & B.Gray; Lissochilus monticolus Rendle; Lissochilus paludiculus Rchb.f.; Macroclinium coffeicolum (Schltr.) Dodson; Mystacidium muscicolum T.Durand & Schinz; Physurus querceticulus Lindl.; Pseudocentrum sylvicolum Rchb.f.; Saccolabium saxicolum Ridl.; Satyrium paludicolum Schltr. ex Kraenzl.; Satyrium saxicolum Bolus; Stellilabium alticolum Dodson & R.Escobar.

Disa again.

The last Supplement contained the registration of Disa Penelope D. Krige, along with a note explaining that within the grex epithet, the Swedish feminine given name Disa had to be abbreviated to D. in order to avoid repeating the generic name. This provided a clue which may have shed light on the derivation of the generic name Disa, which is generally said to be of obscure meaning and origin. Bolus commented that "it has been suggested from dis (dives) 'rich', in allusion to the magnificence and beauty of the flower." Schultes and Pease, Generic names of orchids: 121 (1963), add that "the derivation of Disa from a presumed local common name of the plant in South Africa is open to serious doubt." While Pooley, Field guide to wild flowers of Kwazulu-Natal: 120 (1998), suggested "possibly from dis - double, referring to two large wings in the style."

The use of Disa in Sweden as a girl's name is of particular interest as the genus Disa was named by the Swedish botanist and physician Peter Jonas Bergius (1730-1790) in his Descriptiones plantarum ex Capite Bonae Spei, published in Stockholm in October 1767.

Disa is a latinisation of the Old Norse element dis meaning goddess, which was used as a suffix in names such as Hjördis (from hjorr, sword and dis, goddess) and Tordis (from Thor, a thunder god and dis, goddess). It apparently features in Norse mythology which shares it in common with Hindu mythology. Consequently there is a cognate in Sanskrit devi, a goddess, (feminine form of deva, god) specifically applied to a wife of Shiva in the Rig-Veda, and used as a standard address for queens, equivalent to 'Your Majesty'. The form Disa is applied to a goddess in Puranic texts as the consort of Shiva (when he is in Bhima) and the mother of Sarga (creation). It is possibly cognate with the more familiar Greek theos and Latin deus.

It appears that Bergius had either a mythological or contemporary person in mind when he established his genus.

Epidendrum, Encyclia & Prosthechea

The following duplicate registrations were discovered:

Catyclia (Epicattleya) Sally Brown (1967) (Encyclia [Epi.] phoenicia x Cattleya bicolor) has priority over the reciprocal cross registered as Catyclia Walnut Valley (2004) which becomes a synonym.

E. Cubahama (1961) takes priority over E. Memoria Wanda Patton (1981)

E. Jennie Goode (1967) takes priority over E. Doña Juana (2004).

Phalaenopsis hybrids bred by Henry Walbrunn.

During recent research using the original colour slides and archives of the late Henry Walbrunn in Florida, Olaf Gruss has determined that Walbrunn's plants labelled as Phalaenopsis parishii where in fact Phalaenopsis lobbii. This has been noted in the registration database with respect to the following grexes: Gretchen's Parish, Minuet, Pauline Brault, Perfection, Pink Heart.

Phalaenopsis hybrids bred using Phal. speciosa 'Orchidglade'.

According to Christenson, Phalaenopsis - a monograph : 153 (2001), a clone of Phal. pulchra has been widely distributed under the name Phal. speciosa 'Orchidglade' SM/SFOS. Plants labelled Phal. speciosa 'Orchidglade' have been used to produce the following three registered grexes: Phal. Amethyst Opal; Phal. George Carson; Renanthopsis Windward Coral. It is possible that plants grown under these grex names may have been made using Phal. pulchra instead of Phal. speciosa, or that individuals of either parentage may be in cultivation.

Stenorrhynchos

Following revision of the Stenorrhynchos speciosum group by E. Christenson in J. Orchideenfr. 12(1): 12-24 (Feb. 2005), the parentage of Stenosarcos Vanguard, Stsc. Hoosier Cardinal and Stenopogon Painted Lady should be changed by replacing Strs. speciosum with Strs. albidomaculatum Christenson.

Trade Designations (Trade Names) and orchids.

In the marketing of many types of horticultural plants it is common for a name to be invented and used for selling purposes. This is known as a trade designation under The International Code of Nomenclature for Cultivated Plants (ICNCP), and commonly referred to as a trade name. However according to the ICNCP, these designations are not names, but merely marketing devices. They are commonly used in the selling of cut flowers and pot plants, both of which involve orchids. This use is understandable, take for example an orchid intended for the pot plant market which may be registered for Plant Breeders Rights under a cultivar name which is less than ideal for marketing purposes, such as Phalaenopsis 'TT 10' such a name is unlikely to build the desire in a consumer leading to a sale. So a marketing name such as Phalaenopsis HALCYON might be used to enhance the perceived desirability of the plant and hence increase sales.

The ICNCP aims to accommodate this usage of trade names by providing rules and recommendations designed to avoid confusion, bearing in mind that different companies may use different trade names for the same clone within one country, and that further different trade names may be coined in both different languages and different countries. As a result a really popular clone could attract a large number of trade designations in many languages. At this point one may begin to see the potential for chaos, particularly in a register of names which is international in scope.

A basic principle of nomenclature in the ICNCP is that a plant may have only one accepted name that is applied universally. Hence the conviction expressed in the code that trade 'names' are not names, and the consequent preferred use of the term trade designation. Since they are not names they cannot be treated as synonyms either, but may be listed as equivalent designations in a catalogue or other nomenclator. It may be noted that the difference between synonym and equivalent is subtle.

To avoid confusion the code stipulates that trade names should be indicated as such by use of a distinguishing type face, such as small capitals and that the accepted name (i. e. established cultivar or grex epithet) should be cited along side to definitively identify the plant concerned. If the trade name is intended to replace a cultivar epithet it is not included in single inverted commas. For example: Phalaenopsis 'Earth Star' is said to be a trade name for Doritaenopsis Abed-nego 'Pine Ridge'. To comply with the code it might be presented on a label or in a catalogue as: Phal. EARTH STAR (Dtps. Abed-nego gx 'Pine Ridge').

To my knowledge this has not yet been applied in orchids. It is also apparent that the use of trade names in orchids is generally underestimated.

It appears that as far as orchids are concerned trade names have also been employed to market a mass cloned pot or cut flower plant, where it is felt desirable to hide the true identity of the product. This being the case, Art. 12.3 stating that a 'Trade name should always be cited together with the accepted name' is unlikely to be heeded.

There are obvious difficulties with this situation. It may not be possible to tell if a trade name is a grex or cultivar equivalent. At times a mass marketed product of unknown parentage with a trade designation might be utilised in a breeding program. What will happen if the breeder wishes to register a grex name for the resultant plants? What if it should win a prestigious award that can only be ratified if the plant is provided with a registered name? It would be desirable and useful if the ICRA could avoid duplicating a trade name in current use for a registered grex name, so creating a situation where the same designation is applied to two different plants. These are some of the points that need to be addressed.

Consider the following example. A plant awarded as Champion Seedling at a recent show was reported as Cymbidium (Catamarca x Roger Roger) in Orchids Australia 17(5): 59 (Oct. 2005). Neither of these parental names, presented as grex epithets, are registered as grexes.

Subsequent enquiry revealed that apparently Roger Roger was a designation used to sell as flowering pot plants individuals culled from a breeding program because their flowers did not measure up to the breeder's high standards. Therefore Roger Roger is a trade name substituting for the registered grex name under which higher quality individuals from the same batch of seedlings are reportedly sold. It also transpired that Catamarca is an abbreviated form of the cultivar name 'Catamarca 105', mistakenly used in place of an available grex name. A suggested presentation of this name is: Cym. (Mighty Tracey 'Catamarca 105' x ROGER ROGER).

The situation can be improved by application of the Code (ICNCP) which is in the long term best interest of all concerned with orchids. It is self-evident that there will need to be further guide lines and discussion on the use and function of trade names. In the meantime the registrar would like to draw attention to and endorse Rec. 12A.1 "Trade designations should always be reported to the appropriate International Cultivar Registration Authority." Only if the scope and extent of the problem becomes known can we begin to understand the needs of those involved and develop appropriate procedures for nomenclature and registration.

If you are aware of any trade names used in orchids and the possible identity of the plants concerned, please send the information to the registrar at the address below.
