

Designer's Biography

Camellia Hayes has taken a more unconventional route to landscape architecture, having spent the last decade focusing on her athletics. However, Camellia's fascination with nature's immersive and restorative qualities have remained a constant throughout her life.

Now Camellia is writing her Master's dissertation, in which she is researching the relationship between workplace greenspaces and mental health. This is a topic close to her heart, which she hopes supports the need for more high-quality greenspaces in the urban environment.

In 2022 Camellia took part in her first RHS flower show and won a Silver-Gilt medal for her Tatton Park border 'The Healing Garden'. A year on, Camellia is ready to take the step up and is excited to create her first show garden.
